

I'm pretty competent with databases and have written data access layers in the past so this assignment was not too bad. The worst part was setting up the connection pool and actually connection to the DB. Once I had the connection set up the rest went fairly smoothly.

I had the most difficulty fixing errors left over from the last assignment related to session tracking. I did not have a good handle on how to implement session tracking and there were a lot of errors. I now have a better understanding of how session tracking works and was able to correct all of the errors.
